BAILEY HOLDS 3,458 LEAD

Bearden Re-Elected; and Rider Is County Judge

Bailey Is Circuit Clerk; and Franks County Treasurer

Monroe and Vesey Elected to Hempstead Posts in Legislature

BAILEY OVER COOK Attorney General Gets Hempstead's Vote for the Governorship

Sheriff Jim Bearden was re-elected when complete unofficial returns including absentee ballots were tabulated Wednesday.

Bearden's total vote was 2,263. His opponent, Frank Ward, polled a total of 1,480. Bearden's margin is 783.

Late returns enabled Frank Rider of Patmos to overcome a lead of L. F. Higginson to win the race of county judge on complete unofficial returns.

Rider's total is 1,231. Higginson polled 1,048. Ruffin White trailed with 781, followed by R. L. Byers with 709 votes.

Ralph Is Clerk

Ralph Bailey won the nomination for circuit clerk with a total vote of 1,490. Elmer Brown was second with 1,247. Totals for the other three candidates: Arthur C. Anderson, 363; W. A. Formby, 298; J. W. Davis, 203.

For county treasurer, complete returns gave Clifford Franks 981 votes against 862 for Charles Reynerson, a margin of 119. H. M. Stephens was third with 682; L. L. Pilkinton fourth with 542; Lillie Middlebrooks fifth with 340; and Frank May sixth with 149 votes.

State Offices

The complete Hempstead county vote on state and district races was: U. S. Senator: Robinson, 2,618; Venable, 429; Holland, 672.

Governor: McDonald, 632; Bailey, 1,575; Reed 19; Cook, 1,227; Terral, 154.

Lieutenant Governor: Combs, 893; Bailey, 1,690; Levine, 234; Gates, 469; Thorn, 519.

Attorney General: Holt, 2,883; Norfleet, 786.

Secretary of State: Neal, 1,638; Hall, 2,116.

Auditor: Humphrey, 1,525; Parker, 1,347.

Chief Justice: Johnson, 2,095; Smith, 1,675.

Land Commissioner: Page, 1,940; Clark, 931; Mizell, 183; Jimserson, 391; Bethune, 176.

National Committeeman: Hays, 2,603; Huston, 978.

National Committeewoman: Fitzhugh, 1,042; Frost, 2,555.

Congress: Kitchens, 2,290; Marsh, 1,488.

Melons Vote Getters

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Watermelon fans are good vote getters, candidates in a recent Texas primary discovered. In fact, they were more popular in Dallas county than kissing babies, orchestras, stork fries or morning coffee.

Children and grown-ups—an eighth of a melon to the person with no second helping—cleaned up 185 tons of the juicy, red fruit at the expense of candidates during the campaign.

Borah Leading in Idaho's Election

Townsendite Opponent Is Trailing Him for the G.O.P. Nomination

BOIS, Idaho.—(AP)—Senator William E. Borah, bidding for a sixth term, took the lead for the Republican senatorial nomination over Townsend-backed Byron Defenbach in early returns Tuesday night from Idaho's statewide primary. Returns from four of the state's 850 precincts gave Borah 634 votes and Defenbach 284.

Scattered returns in the Democratic primary gave United States District Attorney John Carver, who aspires to Borah's senatorial seat, a slight margin over Idaho's three-term cowboy governor, C. Ben Ross. Carver received 74 votes from two precincts. Ross polled 62 in the same districts.

While the Democrats and Republicans battled Tuesday, two minority parties—Union and Socialist—held nominating conventions, as did the state Townsendite organization.

Andrews Wins in Florida

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(AP)—Former Circuit Judge C. O. Andrews of Orlando Tuesday apparently won the Democratic nomination for the post left vacant by the late United States Senator Park Trimmell.

With the vote from Tuesday's special primary tabulated from 951 of the state's 1,322 precincts, Andrews, who had the Townsend Club endorsement, led former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Tampa by nearly 5,000 votes. Carlton conceded his defeat.

The vote at 951 precincts was:

Andrews 58,032

Carlton 53,413

Claude Pepper, Tallahassee lawyer, automatically received Democratic nomination for the unexpired term of the late United States Senator Duncan U. Fletcher who died just a month after Trimmell. He was unopposed.

The Fletcher Senate term expires in 1939. The Trimmell term in 1941.

Republicans have announced they would nominate candidates for the Senate posts at a meeting of the state Executive Committee in the near future.

State Offices

The complete Hempstead county vote on state and district races was: U. S. Senator: Robinson, 2,618; Venable, 429; Holland, 672.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—Now Mr. Mussolini, foreman of Italy, is about to start a campaign to induce Italians in this country to return to the fatherland, but one told me yesterday business here is too good to leave, and that those on relief were satisfied.

The Alforats, composed chiefly of former office-holders, didn't endorse any candidate when they wound up their conference in Detroit last week, but made it plain Roosevelt, Thomas, Lemke and even Browder were on the black list. That assures Mr. Landon at least fifty votes without a struggle. What's become of Mae West?

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

The first step in overcoming a kidney disorder is to determine the cause of the trouble, and the next is to reduce as much as possible the amount of work that the kidney has to do. In seeking the cause, the doctor examines not only the kidney but all other organs and tissues of the body, since their failure to function may have affected the kidney. The doctor does this by making suitable chemical examinations and determining the chemical changes that have taken place in the patient's blood. Rest for the kidney is especially important in restoring it to health. This rest may be supplied by shifting the work of the kidney to other organs, such as the skin and the bowels, and helping the disturbed organ carry on the little work it has to do. If the patient rests in bed, the kidney unquestionably will be benefited. Increase in the amount of sweating will give the skin an opportunity to do some of the work ordinarily done by the kidney. Use of mild laxatives and enemas also may shift to the bowel some of the usual work of the kidneys.

Finally, carefully selected diet is especially important. The old-fashioned milk diet is not satisfactory, because it may provide too much fluid, or too much protein, for the individual case. The diet, invariably, depends upon results of the study made by the doctor.

In his examination, the doctor will consider the amount of salt, water, and protein that should be permitted. If there is an accumulation of fluid in the body, such as occurs in the condition called dropsy, it is necessary to control the intake of salt and fluid. If there is a great rise in the amount of urea, or of nitrogen, in the blood, the doctor will have to cut down the amount of protein taken into the body.

At the same time, it is important to see that the patient gets enough vitamins and mineral salts to keep his body at a maximum of nutrition.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

I do wish people would stop saying hungry. The other is to fix things that butterflies make caterpillars that eat red hot elements; that the moon may someday pull the tides over the mountains; that there is no such thing as beauty, only an arrangement of atoms.

However, this is to be no editorial on realism or a dissertation in philosophy. It concerns, of all things, spinach.

Nagged During Meals
Spinach that used to be a delicacy, and all the foods it stands for, have reached the ignominious level of vitamins and energy units. Sometimes I wonder how certain children can eat at all, with "Now drink your milk and grow big;" "Just one more bite of egg if you want to be fat like Daddy;" "This rice pudding is full of calories, and calories make muscle."

Food has become realistic. It is translated into formulae of health and hygiene, right before the children, too. It has lost a lot of its good old yum-yum appeal.

I wonder how many youngsters this year have been coaxed to gulp down all sorts of sad messes by a touch on stomach and biceps, with mother saying, "It goes 'round and 'round and comes out here, in your arm muscles."

The children want to grow big, and they know food makes them strong, but they must get as tired of hearing these merry quips as we did when that old chestnut about burnt crusts making curly hair was extant.

Hunger Is Sure Cure
There are two ways of getting children to eat. One is to let them get

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—Not all the acting is recorded by the camera when Cecil DeMille directs a picture. He himself, portraying himself, always gives the best performance. DeMille behaves as Hollywood directors popularly are expected to behave. He wears shiny brown boots, riding breeches, and loud shirts. He pants and snorts and tugs at the few hairs left on his head. He enjoys working himself into a frenzy, but nobody except an awed visitor or a green actor is frightened by his fiery tirades.

He first broke into print as the wild man of the Hollywoods away back in 1915. Now, at the age of 55, he's directing his sixty-third picture and can still out-yell all the other directors combined. It's even rumored that he practices yelling in his spare and private moments.

Located by Sound
"The Plainsman" is DeMille's current production. This is the one that was going to be about Buffalo Bill Cody but now deals with Wild Bill Hickok (Gary Cooper) and Calamity Jane (Jean Arthur). It isn't difficult to locate the outdoor set on which the company is working. DeMille's voice, amplified by a loud-speaker, can be heard all over the 27-acre lot.

The scene, when I was there, was the steamboat wharf of a Missouri river town. A crowd of bow-legged miners, excited children, sweet old ladies, soldiers, and hunters in buckskin was milling down the gangplank. Cooper, in high-heeled boots, tight

14 weeks or more. For 14 weeks DeMille will fume and howl at his actors and crew. He'll wear a different colored shirt every day, with jewelry to match, and will keep a mirror fish on those boots.

He'll rant and tear and lose several pounds working himself into a fine fither.

But his players and subordinates still will worship him when the last footage is shot. They'll say, admiringly, "The old man sure has got the old ginger, all right."

They know he's an actor at heart. "outwardly farter!"

CHAPTER XII
ANN dressed quickly, and re-joined Bill on the boathouse docks. In those few moments since Bill had come to her with the tale of the stolen bonds her thoughts had raced swiftly, but her course was perfectly clear. Though it would take courage for her to go before the people in the lobby of the hotel and say that she had spent last night on the mountain with Bill Ware, she had steeled herself to do it. Of course Bill couldn't have taken the bonds, and it was her duty to shield him.

As they walked up the lake shore toward the hotel her heart went out to Bill Ware.

She didn't tell him what she was going to do. But she looked the hotel manager in the eye, and said, "I spent the entire night in a lean-to with Bill Ware. We were trapped by a storm on the mountain! We didn't return to the hotel until this morning."

Bill stood there, clenching his fists, but feeling fiercely proud of her. She was a game one, all right. There was nothing he could do about her frank admission before all those people, except—

His eyes glittered with a new light, as he faced her. They were together now against the world.

Outside, on the terrace, he said, "But why—why did you do it?"

"Because it was the only thing to do," she said. "And because—"

His eyes grew wide. "Do you mean it? Oh, you must!"

A BELLBOY came out on the porch to call Ann to the telephone. She left Bill, standing there with all his hopes of winning the sun and the moon and the earth and the stars.

The voice on the telephone was Jaime's. He said, "I want to see you, Ann. Please."

The sound of that voice still had a hold on her. His plea evoked her sympathy.

"I'm sorry I behaved as I did on the docks," Jaime went on. "I didn't even stop to say goodby. That's why I want to see you. I want to apologize. I think you're a swell girl." He added, "I'm leaving for Canada within the hour. I'll drive by to see you in the car."

Ann knew she distrusted Jaime

now, but she gave her assent. When she came back on the terrace Bill watched her closely.

"That was Jaime," she said. "He's on his way to Canada."

"That's funny," Bill said curtly. "He borrowed $50 from me day before yesterday. I should think he might have let me know if he was leaving."

"Ann stared at him, wide-eyed. "Did Jaime need money? Do you suppose he lost so much gambling on the races that he—"

"I didn't know what he wanted with it. It seems that he lives on an allowance—so much a month. He was in a jam, and promised to pay me back today."

Ann's eyes were dark. "Could those missing bonds be disposed of in Canada?" she said.

"Yes."

Ann whirled about, and faced the water. Her throat hurt her. Tears dimmed her eyes.

JAIME did not show up at the Glenwood Inn. By the time he had his bags packed the detectives had come to his room in the big hotel across the lake, and arrested him. One of the guests had seen him prowling around the inn around 1 o'clock the night before. He had come, ostensibly, to find Ann.

They found the bonds in one of Jaime's bags. He broke down then and admitted that he had lost heavily on the races. He needed some money quickly to cover margins on a stock deal. A weakling to the core, he had planted the wrapper in Bill's room to throw suspicion on him.

Ann heard this news from Bill. After that she had gone to her room, thrown herself face down on the bed, and lain there for almost an hour.

When she arose she bathed her eyes and went down to meet Bill again. They walked along the lake shore, and took an old road leading into the woods. Ann didn't want to see anybody. She didn't even want to think.

They talked of trivial, meaningless things such as the color of autumn leaves and the new movies. But when they reached Echo Pond, Bill reached out and took her hand. They walked along, saying little.

"Go on," Bill said finally. "Tell me why you were willing to take my side? It took a lot of the right stuff in you to tell those people that you and I were marooned in the mountains."

Ann turned to him, and her eyes were shining again. "Oh, that!" she said carelessly. "But I do love you, Bill. Why shouldn't I take your side against the whole world?"

He gathered her in his arms. "You angel," he murmured. "You darling."

WHEN she had recovered her breath after this crushing embrace she said, smiling, "Please, Mr. Ware! Why, I hardly know you. Aren't you just the young man who sold me this vacation?"

"You bet I am! And now I'd like like to sell you myself. I've a good job, and I like it. I've just had a raise. There comes a time when every young man wants to be married. I don't see any reason why we shouldn't be."

"Then ask me," she said, smiling.

"Will you marry me?"

"Of course I will!"

"Now? Today?" His eyes were bright.

"Why, Bill—"

He shrugged his shoulders, and ran a hand boyishly through his hair. "Gee, why didn't we make up our minds down in the city? Then we might have had two weeks' honeymoon up here in this glorious spot."

Ann was practical. "We still have three days, twelve hours and—she glanced at her wrist watch—"twenty-four minutes."

His look was wistful. "Yes, we have to be back at work Monday at 9. But I don't care."

"I don't care, either," she said. "We're together now. All the world"—her hands made a sweeping gesture over the mountains and hills—"is ours."

"Ours," he repeated after her. "Ours!"

They walked slowly back to the hotel, planning their life together. Ann had to pinch herself to be sure it was all true. Bill Ware! The boy who had been working close to her in the canyons of the city all these years, the working lad whom she had overlooked in her perennial quest. Vacation romance, to them, had been sweet.

33 Tenants Work Their Co-op Farm

Sherwood Eddy's Private Project Under Way in Mississippi

By DICK HARRIS
Associated Press Writer
HILLHOUSE, Miss.—(AP)—With 2,138 acres of backshot land on the Mississippi delta and an idea as working capital, a little group here is attempting through co-operative farming to provide economic independence for 33 tenant farmers and their families.

Sherwood Eddy, New York writer and lecturer, promoted the idea—the old plan of pooling effort and resources for the common good—and financed the land purchase, and the project got under way four months ago with 12 mules and a horse, a tractor, a few farm implements and nine ramshackle houses.

An inventory today shows 215 acres of cotton, 40 acres of alfalfa already cut twice and more than 1,000 bales stored, a small crop of corn, a 15-acre vegetable garden, 14 new two-room houses and a community house, 750 chickens, a hog farm, a saw mill and lumber cut for houses and outside sale, a blacksmith shop, a school and a community store.

Peniless Get Chance
Sponsors say the tenants were peniless families sunk in a bog of despair and ignorance. Many could not even sign their names. They were unable to grasp the idea behind the movement. But they welcomed any help and were pleased to move to Hillhouse.

"She is good down here," says one of them, DeWitt Bulletin, 48-year-old negro, who says he was evicted from a Crittenden county, Ark., plantation last December for belonging to the Southern Tenant Farmers union.

Seventeen-year-old Virgil Reese expresses a more advanced view:

"We are going to make a go of this," he says. "Before long we'll be getting something out of it. Maybe I'll even get to go to school this fall. I've only been as far as the sixth grade and haven't been to school in four years."

Sponsors Direct Project
Their families and others, 19 negro and 12 white, moved into the shacks on the farm, accepted from Eddy enough cash to live on—an average of about $20 a month, Sam Franklin, the farm supervisor, estimates—and started building and planting. To most the farm still is "just a good place to live."

Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of philosophy at Union theological seminary in New York, heads the board of trustees selected by Eddy and those who helped him finance the farm. The board holds a trust deed to the land and is the supreme directing authority.

Eddy is secretary-treasurer. Other members are William R. Anderson, a Memphis, Tenn., college professor, John Rust, one of the inventors of a mechanical cotton picker, which Franklin says will be used on the farm this fall, and Franklin, a one-time missionary in China.

Residents Elect Council
An advisory council to be elected every six months by the tenants superintendents the practical farm work. Its president serves as mayor of Hillhouse.

The colony is organized in two co-operatives. A producers co-operative supervises production—planting, cultivating and building. A consumers co-operative, headed by B. E. Trendway, a former printer, has charge of distributing supplies to the tenants and selling their products to the outside.

Three staff men, Franklin, Trendway and Eugene Cox, a graduate last year of Texas Christian university, receive salaries.

Other supervisors are Jane Cassels, national Y.W.C.A. chairman, a graduate last year of a Georgia college, who serves without pay as supervisor of the school, and Shirley Moody, 19, who has charge of recreation.

Return to Be Shared
After operating expenses and provisions for retiring the capital investment have been deducted, Trendway explains, "the net return will be divided among member producers according to the quality and quantity of their work."

Skilled laborers, for instance, will draw more than unskilled workers. Men and women are allowed to work only 10 hours a day. Children under 12 are barred from the fields but are paid two cents a child by the hour for caring for younger children while their parents work.

After next year the trustees plan to make the tenants permanent members of the project. Franklin says the board works on the assumption that "in four or five years we will be able to turn it over to the people."

Whites, Negroes Equal
Under the policy defined by Eddy, whites and negroes receive "equal treatment," but the two races are housed in different sections of the farm and attend separate churches, recreation centers and schools.

Miss Cassels, the school teacher, holds classes for the white children in the mornings and for the negro boys and girls in the afternoon.

Miss Moody, recreation director, plays the guitar and sings "hill-billy" songs for the tenants.

Franklin points this picture of the future:

"Within 10 years we hope to have 75 to 100 families here, a supplementary school and a high school, a clinic which our neighbors can use along with us . . . wipe malaria out of the county . . . foster higher education . . . bring out a good class of leaders . . . build attractive hangarous . . . a lighting system . . . build a cannery . . . have orchards . . . and maybe even build a theater."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning!
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get them two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else, too.

Salute to the Trees

Many a tree is found in the wood. And every tree for its use is good; Some for the strength of the gnarled root. Some for the sweetness of flower and fruit; Some for shelter against the storm. And some to keep the hearthstone warm. Some for the roof and some for the beam. And some for a boat to breast the stream. In the wealth of the wood since the world began. The trees have offered their gifts to man. But the glory of trees is more than their gifts; 'Tis a beautiful wonder of life that lifts. From a wrinkled seed in an earth-bound clod, A column, an arch in the temple of God. A pillar of power, a dome of delight. A shrine of song, and joy of sight. Their roots are the nurses of rivers in birth. Their leaves are alive with the breath of the earth; They shelter the dwellings of man; and they bend O'er his grave with a look of a loving friend.—Henry Van Dyke.

Now that the people have expressed their choice, and the thing has been settled at the polls, we just wonder what will occupy the time of these hot days, since whittling, talking and arguing have served their day, there seems to be nothing left but the weather, or else keep busy regretting that our particular choice in candidates did not win out, reflect on the war situation in Europe, or spend the time in being grateful that as we observe the anniversary of the beginning of the World War which began 22 years ago this month, that we, as a nation are trying to build the kind of society, in which war is unlikely, and we hope to hold that civilization.

built from blood and toil and dreams, free from what is going on across the waters. Before closing this preamble, we would like to comment on the absence of candidates and cards that usually greet the voter and litter up our streets for days after an election. It was indeed a happy suggestion or agreement that the old time "last reminder" was eliminated in this election, and we would like to congratulate the winners, and remind them that most of us have faith in the promises they made during the campaign.

Bennett to Preach

Week at Couch Revival,
Fifth and Elm

The Rev. J. H. Bennett, member of the First Baptist church of this city, and the first person to graduate from Ouchita college, will bring the message Wednesday at the tent revival at Fifth and Elm streets. Although Rev. Bennett is more than eighty years old, he is still a powerful preacher. He has just returned from a revival in Missouri and will leave again Thursday for another revival in the state. The Rev. Bill Couch spoke Tuesday night on the subject, "Getting Joy Out of Religion." The attendance at Tuesday night's service was much better than that of last week.

New Dick Powell Film at Saenger

"Hearts Divided" Co-Stars Him With Miss Marion Davies

Harry Warren and Al Dubin, the foremost song writing team in motion pictures who have scores of hits to their credit, composed two numbers for "Hearts Divided," an historical romance laid in Baltimore, Washington and Paris in the year 1803, which comes to the Saenger theater on Thursday and Friday.

The songs are sung by Dick Powell, Miss Davies' leading man, who portrays Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, in the production. Miss Davies joins him in one song, "My Kingdom for a Kiss." The ballad is sung by Powell in both French and in English.

The second catchy air is the theme song "Two Hearts Divided," also sung by Powell.

In the role of Jerome Bonaparte, Powell comes to America to negotiate the sale of the territory of Louisiana to the colonies in behalf of Napoleon. Assuming an incognito when he tries of Washington's social obligations, he attends a race near Baltimore, where he meets Betsy Patterson, played by Miss Davies.

He falls in love with her, seeks and obtains from her father, Henry Stephenson, the post of music and French tutor to Betsy. In this capacity he has a splendid opportunity to use the voice that has thrilled millions of theatre goers.

Mongrel Pets Get Call in Hollywood

Scores of Mixed Breeds Have Crept Into Hearts of the Film Folk

By BYRON COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD. — Even the hound dogs and alley cats of Hollywood can achieve that animal heaven usually reserved for pedigreed pets: adoption into a movie home.

Scores of them have done so, creeping with ragged coats and dejected mien into the affections of director, hearted actor folk, and remaining there sleek, well-fed and happy.

George Brent has four pedigreed dogs, but he also has Mrs. Malaprop, a mongrel he found at an animal shelter. Another mongrel owner is Hugh Herbert.

Dog-givers have selected Clark Gable as a mark for their generosity. He has found six at his front door, each with a note requesting a home. He kept two and gave the others away.

Saga of Minnie
Minnie used to be an established member of the Virginia Bruce household. A striped alley cat, Minnie wandered in one day, was fed, and refused to leave. She soon produced progeny—quintuplets. When Virginia moved, the cat family moved, too, but Minnie disappeared the second day.

Claudine West, the scenarist, swings into action at sight of a homeless dog or cat. She now cares for two dogs and five cats in her own home, and "boards out" seven dogs and three cats. Another scenarist, Grover Jones, is especially partial to Old Sport, the only unpedigreed dog in his kennels. "Enemy," a bright-eyed mongrel, mostly poodle, wandered onto a film location one day and became the pet of Florence Rice, who says he has more personality than any ribbon mongrel, just wandered in, too, to join "Whiskers," his pedigreed sheep dog. "Humphrey Bogart," the cat he admires, is only one-fourth Maine but the seven-year-old "Tommy" has been his constant companion through stage tours and is with him in Hollywood.

Adopts A Horse
"Rags" followed Beverly Roberts home from the corner market one evening. He's just a pooch, extraction uncertain. In the same manner did Ann Preston acquire her two ginger kittens.

Besides his pedigreed dogs, Warren William has "Buddy" and "Rags," the former an adopted stray, the latter rescued from the pound. "Miggs" is the distinctive name Patric Knowles gave the alley cat that adopted him.

Tom, Nellie and Hi-Fockets, three cats who adopted Dick Powell, now live in a fair state of peace with his thoroughbred dog. But Joan Blondell has Scraggy, a rather question-markish pooch, and Caruso, a backfence vocalist. And when and if Joan and Dick marry—will the peace be maintained?

Noah Berry, Jr., however, probably outdoes them all. He adopted a stray horse, an Indian pony bought for $1 on a recent location.

The largest beetle of the 100,000 known species in the world is the brown Goliath beetle of equatorial Africa. It is about four inches long.

On an average, women are said to live longer than men because they live quieter lives and do not take so many risks.

The buildings are of trim brick, are fireproof and all look alike. The townspeople will move in August 15 and family breadwinners will begin paying Landlord Uncle Sam from $23.47 to $38.10 monthly for apartments, the price depending on whether they have 3, 4, 5 or 6 rooms.

Rental will cover electricity used in running the new electric stoves and refrigerators the PWA has placed in every kitchen as well as hot and cold water and heating service.

Labour Savers
But the kitchen equipment is not the only thing that elicits "ahs" from housewives inspecting the apartments. They like the elevated radiators which allow sweeping under them as a minimum of back bending, the steel casement windows that may be washed inside and out from within the room, the incineration system, the asphalt tile floors with linoleum in the kitchen, the glazed tile halls, walls that may be washed, copper screens in every window and shades already hung.

Then there are centrally located laundries, tennis courts, playground, kindergarten, library and auditorium.

Techwood was created at a cost of $2,000,000 and replaced a negro section.

Jesse Brown Wins Bonus From Ford

Awarded $100 Check for Best Used Car Sales in Memphis District

Jesse Brown, salesman for Hope Auto company, Wednesday received a $100 bonus check from Ford Motor company of Memphis for selling the greatest net dollar value of used cars, based on a population bracket of the Memphis district.

Mr. Brown's record showed that he sold 65 used cars during the month of July for a total of $11,748.17. He competed against all salesmen in the Memphis district which comprises several southern states.

I. T. Urrey of the Hope Auto company was given special mention in the "News Flash," publication of the Ford Motor company, for the sale of new cars in the Memphis district, based on a population bracket.

Behind him, sunk level with the windmill, was a radio, in his right hand he held a white handkerchief which he never pocketed. Occasionally he put it to his face. His sides tip-toed, spoke softly.

At 68 he still looks much as he did when George Gray Barnard, famous sculptor, cast Macfadden in bronze.

To his walking proclivities he has added an enthusiasm for flying, and now pilots his own plane. A year ago he walked 320 miles to Donville, N. Y., in two weeks—then flew back in an hour and a half. This year he couldn't make the annual walk because of political engagements.

Advocates Single Tax
"I believe in a balanced budget," he says. "Constructive plans with that end in view should be formulated. What everyone wants is security, now, next year, and five years from now."

"I think business organizations should take their workers into partnership—sign them up for a division of the profits and do away with violence and bloody strikes."

"This could be done by allocating some of the profits to stockholders and some to the workers."

"I believe in a single tax, which would include all other taxes. As it is now, city, state and federal tax bodies cut up revenues by their numbers."

He also believes farmers should organize along business lines to protect their interests.

Attorney General Gets Hempstead's Vote for the Governorship

Sheriff Jim Bearden was re-elected when complete unofficial returns including absentee ballots were tabulated Wednesday.

Bearden's total vote was 2,263. His opponent, Frank Ward, polled a total of 1,480. Bearden's margin is 783.

Late returns enabled Frank Rider to Patmos to overcome a lead of L. F. Higgins to win the race of county judge on complete unofficial returns.

Rider's total is 1,231. Higgins polled 1,048. Ruffin White trailed with 781, followed by R. L. Byers with 709 votes.

Bailey Is Clerk

Ralph Bailey won the nomination for circuit clerk with a total vote of 1,480. Elmer Brown was second with 1,247. Totals for the other three candidates: Arthur C. Anderson, 363; W. A. Formby, 298; J. W. Davis, 203.

For county treasurer, complete returns gave Clifford Franks 981 votes against 862 for Charles Reynerson, a margin of 119. H. M. Stephens was third with 682; L. L. Pilkinton fourth with 542; Lillie Middlebrooks fifth with 340; and Frank May sixth with 119 votes.

Luke Monroe and John P. Vesey were elected representatives to the legislature. The vote: Vesey 1878; Monroe 1869; Emory A. Thompson was third with 1,504; Hugh D. Clark polled 1,196; and C. G. Hays 396.

R. E. McDowell was re-elected county clerk without opposition. Mrs. Isabelle Onstead was unopposed for county tax assessor, and Dr. J. H. Weaver was re-elected county coroner without opposition.

State Offices

The complete Hempstead county vote on state and district races was: U. S. Senator: Robinson, 2,618; Venable, 429; Holland, 672.

Governor: McDonald, 632; Bailey, 1,575; Reed 19; Cook, 1,227; Terral, 154.

Lieutenant Governor: Combs, 893; Bailey, 1,690; Levine, 231; Gates, 469; Thorn, 519.

Attorney General: Holt, 2,883; Norfleet, 788.

Secretary of State: Neal, 1,636; Hall, 216.

Auditor: Humphrey, 1,525; Packer, 1,347.

Chief Justice: Johnson, 2,095; Smith, 1,675.

Land Commissioner: Page, 1,940; Clark, 931; Mizell, 183; Jernerson, 391; Bethune, 176.

National Committeewoman: Hays, 2,603; Hinton, 978.

National Committeewoman: Fitzhugh, 1,042; Frost, 2,555.

Congress: Kitchens, 2,290; Marsh, 1,488.

Some Potatoes!

ELLÖRE, S. C.—(AP)—W. B. Williams, farmer, has found a way to make big potatoes out of little ones. He says he planted 23 bushels of small-sized potatoes to grow sprouts for transplanting. The original potatoes, he declares, not only grew excellent sprouts for transplanting but developed into large No. 1 grade potatoes which he marketed at a good price.

Melons Vote Getters

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Watermelon feasts are good vote getters, candidates in a recent Texas primary discovered. In fact, they were more popular in Dallas county than kissing babies, orchestras, steak fries or morning coffee.

Children and grown-ups—an eighth of a melon to the person with no second helping—cleaned up 185 tons of the juicy, red meat at the expense of candidates during the campaign.

Borah Leading in Idaho's Election

Townsendite Opponent Is Trailing Him for the G.O.P. Nomination

BOISE, Idaho.—(AP)—Senator William E. Borah, bidding for a sixth term, took the lead for the Republican senatorial nomination over Townsendite Byron Defenbach in early returns Tuesday night from Idaho's statewide primary. Returns from four of the state's 850 precincts gave Borah 634 votes and Defenbach 284.

Scattered returns in the Democratic primary gave United States District Attorney John Carver, who aspires to Borah's senatorial seat, a slight margin over Idaho's three-term cowboy governor, C. Ben Ross. Carver received 74 votes from two precincts. Ross polled 62 in the same districts.

While the Democrats and Republicans battled Tuesday, two minority parties—Union and Socialist—held nominating conventions, as did the state Townsendite organization.

Andrews Wins in Florida

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(AP)—Mayor Circuit Judge C. O. Andrews of Orlando Tuesday apparently won the Democratic nomination for the post left vacant by the late United States Senator Park Trammell.

With the vote from Tuesday's special primary tabulated from 551 of the state's 1,322 precincts, Andrews, who had the Townsend Club endorsement, led former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Tampa by nearly 5,000 votes. Carlton conceded his defeat.

The vote at 551 precincts was:

Andrews 58,032

Carlton 53,413

Claude Pepper, Tallahassee lawyer, automatically received Democratic nomination for the unexpired term of the late United States Senator Duncan U. Fletcher who died just a month after Trammell. He was unopposed.

The Fletcher Senate term expires in 1939, the Trammell term in 1941.

Republicans have announced they would nominate candidates for the Senate posts at a meeting of the state Executive Committee in the near future.

Hempstead's First Bale Is Brought in

Earliest for Cotton to Reach Market Here Since the Year 1925

The first bale of cotton produced in Hempstead county was purchased in Hope Wednesday by E. C. Brown & Co. The bale brought 12½ cents per pound.

The bale was grown by C. E. Rosenbaum of Fulton. It was ginned there Tuesday by W. E. Cox & Son.

Cotton men recalled Wednesday that the bale brought in by Mr. Rosenbaum was the earliest since 1925. It weighed 320 pounds.

A petition was being circulated here Wednesday for premiums for the first Hempstead county bale.

Tells Politicians to Keep Healthy

Bernarr Macfadden Discovers Three Rules for the Campaigner

By CHARLES NORMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Bernarr Macfadden thinks the political health of the country is worse than its physical health, but he's still enough of a physical culturist to offer a few tips to election campaigners.

Rule number one, he says, is not to overeat. (He himself doesn't believe in three meals a day and eats only when he is hungry.)

Rule two: Don't overdrink.

Rule three: Balance mental efforts with physical exercise.

Turned Brown

By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—Now Mr. Mussolini, foreman of Italy, is about to start a campaign to induce Italians in this country to return to the fatherland, but one told me yesterday business here is too good to leave, and that those on relief were satisfied.

The Alforats, composed chiefly of former office-holders, didn't endorse any candidate when they wound up their conference in Detroit last week, but made it plain Roosevelt, Thomas, Lemke and even Browder were on the black list. That assures Mr. Landon at least fifty votes without a struggle. What's become of Mac West?

Vast Crowd Here on Election Night

Star Election Extra Carried 27,573 More Votes Than Morning Papers

Hope wore a Saturday shopping-crowd look at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning when all southwest Arkansas, apparently, came here and stayed up all night to hear the election returns.

Crowds jammed all the streets of the downtown district, and spread out over the spacious postoffice lawn adjoining The Star building, where the returns on state and district and local races were broadcast.

The Star kept the election wire of the Associated Press open, until 1 o'clock, putting out its election extra at that time—three hours later than ever before in history.

The Star's election extra, put on sale in the city to the overnight crowd, and distributed to all rural mail subscribers Wednesday morning, carried a tabulation of 86,430 votes from the state at large. Wednesday morning's Arkansas Gazette carried only 58,857—or 27,573 less.

Returns were broadcast by The Star with a projector throwing the figures on a screen across Walnut street from the newspaper building, while music and announcements came from a loud-speaker on the newspaper's roof, the loud-speaker having been loaned by Hempstead County Lumber company.

No trouble was reported by authorities in handling the crowd. State officials authorized the opening of liquor stores after the polls had closed, but the stores were kept closed in Hope under a city ordinance, which helped maintain order.

Deputy Becomes Sheriff

FORT WORTH, Texas.—(AP)—Deputy Sheriff A. B. Carter, 44, Tuesday took over the reins relinquished by the death Monday of Sheriff Carl Smith, 48.

Tarrant county commissioners granted the request of 30 deputies asking Carter's appointment to fill out Smith's unexpired term. He was sworn in a few minutes later.

Carter announced he would retain the $3,000 of the $6,500 salary, giving the remainder to Smith's sisters, Misses Lelia Mae and Thelma Smith.

SIBENIX, Yugoslavia.—(AP)—King Edward on a leisurely yachting cruise through the Adriatic, went fishing with native anglers Tuesday but what he caught was kept as secret as a matter of state.

The experience was a rare treat for the British monarch, who has seldom tried the sport of battling a "big one" with rod and reel.

Apparently, the king enjoyed himself immensely.

Later the yacht Nahlin departed southward.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

The first step in overcoming a kidney disorder is to determine the cause of the trouble, and the next is to reduce as much as possible the amount of work that the kidney has to do.

In seeking the cause, the doctor examines not only the kidney but all other organs and tissues of the body, since their failure to function may have affected the kidney. The doctor does this by making suitable chemical examinations and determining the chemical changes that have taken place in the patient's blood.

Rest for the kidney is especially important in restoring it to health. This rest may be supplied by shifting the work of the kidney to other organs, such as the skin and the bowels, and helping the disturbed organ carry on the little work it has to do.

If the patient rests in bed, the kidney unquestionably will be benefited. Increase in the amount of sweating will give the skin an opportunity to do some of the work ordinarily done by the kidney. Use of mild laxatives and enemas also may shift to the bowel some of the usual work of the kidneys.

Finally, carefully selected diet is especially important. The old-fashioned milk diet is not satisfactory, because it may provide too much fluid, or too much protein, for the individual case. The diet, invariably, depends upon results of the study made by the doctor.

In his examination, the doctor will consider the amount of salt, water, and protein that should be permitted.

If there is an accumulation of fluid in the body, such as occurs in the condition called dropsy, it is necessary to control the intake of salt and fluid. If there is a great rise in the amount of urea, or of nitrogen, in the blood, the doctor will have to cut down the amount of protein taken into the body.

At the same time, it is important to see that the patient gets enough vitamins and mineral salts to keep his body at a maximum of nutrition.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

I do wish people would stop saying hungry. The other is to fix things that butterflies make caterpillars that ruin things; that stars are only gobs of red hot elements; that the moon may someday pull the tides over the mountains; that there is no such thing as beauty, only an arrangement of atoms.

However, this is to be no editorial on realism or a dissertation in philosophy. It concerns, of all things, spinach.

Nagging During Meals

Spinach that used to be a delicacy, spinach and all the foods it stands for, have reached the ignominious level of vitamins and energy units.

Sometimes I wonder how certain children can eat at all, with "Now drink your milk and grow big!" "Just one more bite of egg if you want to be tall like Daddy!" "This rice pudding is full of calories, and calories make muscle."

Food has become realistic. It is translated into formulas of health and hygiene, right before the children's eyes. It has lost a lot of its good old yum-yum appeal.

I wonder how many youngsters this year have been coaxed to gulp down all sorts of sad messes by a touch on stomach and biceps, with mother saying, "It goes 'round and 'round and comes out here, in your arm muscles."

The children want to grow big, and they know food makes them strong, but they must get as tired of hearing these merry quips as we did when that old chestnut about burnt crusts making early hair was extant.

Hunger Is Sure Cure

There are two ways of getting children to eat. One is to let them get gray pants, and a long purple coat pushed his way through the throng. Fire hoses kept the muddy river swirling along below.

He's Most Excited

DeMille rode a camera crane high over the actors' heads. There was a microphone in front of him, and he used it to berate the 250 extras, his five assistants, and the technical crew.

"Dummies, dummies!" he screamed at two luckless extras. "You're a couple of hams! Hams! Show some life—snap out of it—I want expression!"

He tugged at a handkerchief with his teeth, then yelled at the crowd: "You're supposed to be excited, anxious to get ashore. Intelligent confusion is what I want—intelligent confusion!"

Followed Around

It was hot in the glaring California sun, and perspiration from the ruddy DeMille countenance dripped into the pool. "Missouri river," presently he succeeded in establishing intelligent confusion, and the camera was lowered for a closer shot of the same scene.

One of DeMille's stooges seized the mike, which has a long reel of cord, and carried it around after him. Whenever the DeMille mouth opened to give an order, the stooge held the microphone in front of it.

Meanwhile another stooge followed him with a chair. Wherever he happened to be the director unhesitatingly sat down without bothering to look around. The chair was always there.

His faithful chair boy hasn't missed in four years, since one fateful day when the master fell sprawling. That was a different chair-boy, though.

After All, He's Human

Filming of the picture will require

The Vanishing American

14 weeks or more. For 14 weeks DeMille will fume and howl at his actors and crew. He'll wear a different colored shirt every day, with jewelry to match, and will keep a mirror in his hand.

He'll rant and tear and lose several pounds working himself into a fine frenzy on those boots.

But his players and subordinates still will worship him when the last footage is shot. They'll say, admiringly, "The old man sure has got the old ginger, all right."

They leave his an actor at heart. "outwitted faster!"

The orange globes atop England's "Bellisima" beacons' cost about $125 to replace. Some 3000 of these have been broken in London alone.

CHAPTER XII

ANN dressed quickly, and re-joined Bill on the boathouse decks. In those few moments since Bill had come to her with the tale of the stolen bonds her thoughts had raced swiftly, but her course was perfectly clear. Though it would take courage for her to go before the people in the lobby of the hotel and say that she had spent last night on the mountain with Bill Ware, she had steeled herself to do it. Of course Bill couldn't have taken the bonds, and it was her duty to shield him.

As they walked up the lake shore toward the hotel her heart went out to Bill Ware.

She didn't tell him what she was going to do. But she looked the hotel manager in the eye, and said, "I spent the entire night in a lean-to with Bill Ware. We were trapped by a storm on the mountain! We didn't return to the hotel until this morning."

Bill stood there, clenching his fists, but feeling fiercely proud of her. She was a game one, all right. There was nothing he could do about her frank admission before all those people, except—

His eyes glittered with a new light, as he faced her. They were together now against the world.

Outside, on the terrace, he said, "But why—why did you do it?"

"Because it was the only thing to do," she said. "And because—"

His eyes grew wide. "Do you mean it? Oh, you must!"

A BELLBOY came out on the porch to call Ann to the telephone. She left Bill, standing there with all his hopes of winning the sun and the moon and the earth and the stars.

The voice on the telephone was Jaime's. He said, "I want to see you, Ann. Please."

The sound of that voice still had a hold on her. His plea evoked her sympathy.

"I'm sorry I behaved as I did on the docks," Jaime went on. "I didn't even stop to say goodbye. That's why I want to see you. I want to apologize. I think you're a swell girl." He added, "I'm leaving for Canada within the hour. I'll drive by to see you in the car."

Ann knew she distrusted Jaime

now, but she gave her assent. When she came back on the terrace Bill watched her closely.

"That was Jaime," she said. "He's on his way to Canada."

"That's funny," Bill said curiously. "He borrowed $50 from me yesterday. I should think he might have let me know if he was leaving."

Ann stared at him, wide-eyed. "Did Jaime need money? Do you suppose he lost so much gambling on the races that he—"

"I didn't know what he wanted with it. It seems that he lives on an allowance—so much a month. He was in a jam, and promised to pay me back today."

Ann's eyes were dark. "Could those missing bonds be disposed of in Canada?" she said.

"Yes."

Ann whirled about, and faced the water. Her throat hurt her. Tears dimmed her eyes.

JAIME did not show up at the Glenwood Inn. By the time he had his bags packed the detectives had come to his room in the big hotel across the lake, and arrested him. One of the guests had seen him prowling around the inn around 1 o'clock the night before. He had come, ostensibly, to find Ann.

They found the bonds in one of Jaime's bags. He broke down then and admitted that he had lost heavily on the races. He needed some money quickly to cover margins on a stock deal. A weakling to the core, he had planted the wrapper in Bill's room to throw suspicion on him.

Ann heard this news from Bill. After that she had gone to her room, thrown herself face down on the bed, and lain there for almost an hour.

When she arose she bathed her eyes and went down to meet Bill again. They walked along the lake shore, and took an old road leading into the woods. Ann didn't want to see anybody. She didn't even want to think.

They talked of trivial, meaningless things such as the color of autumn leaves and the new movies. But when they reached Echo Pond, Bill reached out and took her hand. They walked along, saying little.

"Go on," Bill said finally. "Tell me why you were willing to take my side? It took a lot of the right stuff in you to tell those people that you and I were marooned in the mountains."

Ann turned to him, and her eyes were shining again. "Oh, that!" she said carelessly. "But I do love you, Bill. Why shouldn't I take your side against the whole world?"

He gathered her in his arms. "You angel," he murmured. "You darling."

WHEN she had recovered her breath after this crushing embrace she said, smiling, "Please, Mr. Ware! Why, I hardly know you. Aren't you just the young man who sold me this vacation?"

"You bet I am! And now I'd like like to sell you myself. I've a good job, and I like it. I've just had a raise. There comes a time when every young man wants to be married. I don't see any reason why we shouldn't be."

"Then ask me," she said, smiling.

"Will you marry me?"

"Of course I will!"

"Now? Today?" His eyes were bright.

"Why, Bill—"

He shrugged his shoulders, and ran a hand boyishly through his hair. "Gee, why didn't we make up our minds down in the city? Then we might have had two weeks' honeymoon up here in this glorious spot."

Ann was practical. "We still have three days, twelve hours and"—she glanced at her wrist watch—"twenty-four minutes."

His look was wistful. "Yes. We have to be back at work Monday at 9. But I don't care."

"I don't care, either," she said. "We're together now. All the world"—her hands made a sweeping gesture over the mountains and hills—"is ours."

"Ours!" he repeated after her. "Ours!"

They walked slowly back to the hotel, planning their life together. Ann had to pinch herself to be sure it was all true. Bill Ware! The boy who had been working close to her in the canyons of the city all these years, the working lad whom she had overlooked in her perennial quest. Vacation romance, to them, had been sweet.

33 Tenants Work Their Co-op Farm

Sherwood Eddy's Private Project Under Way in Mississippi

By DICK HARRIS

HILLHOUSE, Miss.—(AP)—With 2,138 acres of buckshot land on the Mississippi delta and an idea as working capital, a little group here is attempting through co-operative farming to provide economic independence for 33 tenant farmers and their families.

Sherwood Eddy, New York writer and lecturer, promoted the idea—the old plan of pooling effort and resources for the common good—and financed the land purchase, and the project got under way four months ago with 12 mules and a horse, a tractor, a few farm implements and nine ramshackle houses.

An inventory today shows 215 acres of cotton, 40 acres of alfalfa already cut twice and more than 1,800 bales stored, a small crop of corn, a 15-acre vegetable garden, 14 new two-room houses and a community house, 750 chickens, a hog farm, a saw mill and lumber cut for houses and outside sale, a blacksmith shop, a school and a community store.

Penitence Get Chance

Sponsors say the tenants were penitence families sunk in a bog of despair and ignorance. Many could not even sign their names. They were unable to grasp the idea behind the movement. But they welcomed any haven and were pleased to move to Hillhouse.

"She is good down here," says one of them, DeWitt Bulletin, 48-year-old negro, who says he was evicted from a Crittenden county, Ark., plantation last December for belonging to the Southern Tenant Farmers union.

Seventeen-year-old Virgil Reese expresses a more advanced view: "We are not to give up a go of this," he says. "Before long we'll get to be getting something out of it. Maybe I'll even get to go to school this fall. I've only been as far as the sixth grade and haven't been to school in four years."

Sponsors Direct Project

Their families and others, 19 negro and 12 white, moved into the shack on the farm, accepted from Eddy enough cash to live on—an average of about $20 a month. Sam Franklin, the farm supervisor, estimates—and started building and planting. To most the farm still is "just a good place to live."

Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of philosophy at Union theological seminary in New York, heads the board of trustees selected by Eddy and those who helped him finance the farm. The board holds a trust deed to the land and is the supreme directing authority.

Eddy is secretary-treasurer. Other members are William R. Anderson, a Memphis, Tenn., college professor; John Rust, one of the inventors of a mechanical cotton picker, which Franklin says will be used on the farm this fall, and Franklin, a one-time missionary in China.

Residents Elect Council

An advisory council to be elected every six months by the tenants superintends the practical farm work. Its president serves as mayor of Hillhouse.

The colony is organized in two co-operatives. A producers' co-operative supervises production—planting, cultivating and building. A consumers' co-operative, headed by B. E. Treadway, a former printer, has charge of distributing supplies to the tenants and selling their products to outsiders.

Three staff men, Franklin, Treadway and Eugene Cox, a graduate last year of Texas Christian university, receive salaries.

Other supervisors are Jane Cassels, national Y.W.C.A. chairman, a graduate last year of a Georgia college, who serves without pay as supervisor of the school, and Shirley Moody, 19, who has charge of recreation.

Returns to Be Shared

"After operating expenses and provisions for retiring the capital investment have been deducted," Treadway explains, "the net return will be divided among member producers according to the quality and quantity of their work."

Skilled laborers, for instance, will draw more than unskilled workers. Men and women are allowed to work only 10 hours a day. Children under 12 are barred from the fields but are paid two cents a child by the hour for caring for younger children while their parents work.

After next year the trustees plan to make the tenants permanent members of the project. Franklin says the board works on the assumption that "in four or five years we will be able to turn it over to the people."

Under the policy devised by Eddy, whites and negroes receive "equal treatment," but the two races are housed in different sections of the farm and attend separate churches, recreation centers and schools.

Miss Cassels, the school teacher, holds classes for the white children in the mornings and for the negro boys and girls in the afternoon.

Miss Moody, recreation director, plays the guitar and sings "hill-billy" songs for the tenants.

Franklin paints this picture of the future:

"Within 10 years we hope to have 75 to 100 families here, a supplementary school and a high school, a clinic which our neighbors can use along with us . . . wipe malaria out of the county . . . foster higher education . . . bring out a good class of lenders . . . build attractive bungalows . . . a lighting system . . . build a cannery factory . . . have orchards . . . and maybe even build a theater."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only make-shifts. A more bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes three good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Salute to the Trees
Many a tree is found in the wood. And every tree for its use is good. Some for the strength of the gnarled root. Some for the sweetness of flower and fruit. Some for shelter against the storm. And some to keep the hearthstone warm. Some for the roof and some for the beam. And some for a boat to breast the stream. In the wealth of the wood since the world began. The trees have offered their gifts to man. But the glory of trees is more than their gifts. 'Tis a beautiful wonder of life that from a wrinkled seed in an earth-bound clod, A column, an arch in the temple of God, A pillar of power, a dome of delight, A shrine of song, and joy of sight, Their roots are the nurses of rivers in birth; Their leaves are alive with the breath of the earth; They shelter the dwellings of man; and they bend O'er his grave with a look of a loving friend.—Henry Van Dyke.

Now that the people have expressed their choice, and the thing has been settled at the polls, we just wonder what will occupy the time of these hot days, since whittling, talking and arguing have served their day, there seems to be nothing left but the weather, or else keep busy regretting that our particular choice in candidates did not win out, reflect on the war situation in Europe, or spend the time in being grateful that as we observe the anniversary of the beginning of the World war which began 22 years ago this month, that we, as a nation are trying to build the kind of society, in which war is unlikely, and we hope to hold that civilization.

built from blood and toil and dreams, free from what is going on across the waters. Before closing this preamble, we would like to comment on the absence of candidates and cards that usually greet the voter and litter up our streets for days after an election. It was indeed a happy suggestion or agreement that the old time "last election" was eliminated in this election, and we would like to congratulate the winners, and remind them that most of us have faith in the promises they made during the campaign.

Crowds Improve This Week at Couch Revival, Fifth and Elm

The Rev. J. H. Bennett, member of the First Baptist church of this city, and the first person to graduate from Ouachita college, will bring the message Wednesday at the tent revival at Fifth and Elm streets. Although Rev. Bennett is more than eighty years old, he is still a powerful preacher. He has just returned from a revival in Missouri and will leave again Thursday for another revival in the state. The Rev. Bill Couch spoke Tuesday night on the subject, "Getting Joy Out of Religion." The attendance at Tuesday night's service was much better than that of last week.

"Twenty-seven singers are only twice as loud as one singer." The item must refer to that soprano next door.

New Dick Powell Film at Saenger

"Hearts Divided" Co-Stars Him With Miss Marlon Davies

Harry Warren and Al Dubin, the foremost song writing team in motion pictures who have scores of hits to their credit, composed two numbers for Marion Davies' latest production, "Hearts Divided," an historical romance laid in Baltimore, Washington and Paris in the year 1803, which comes to the Saenger theater on Thursday and Friday.

The songs are sung by Dick Powell, Miss Davies' leading man, who portrays Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, in the production. Miss Davies joins him in one song, "My Kingdom for a Kiss." The ballad is sung by Powell in both French and in English.

The second catchy air is the theme song "Two Hearts Divided," also sung by Powell.

In the role of Jerome Bonaparte, Powell comes to America to negotiate the sale of the territory of Louisiana to the colonies in behalf of Napoleon. Assuming an incognito when he tires of Washington's social obligations, he attends a race near Baltimore, where he meets Betsy Patterson, played by Miss Davies.

He falls in love with her, seeks and obtains from her father, Henry Stephenson, the post of music and French tutor to Betsy. In this capacity he has a splendid opportunity to use the voice that has thrilled millions of theatre goers.

Mongrel Pets Get Call in Hollywood

Scores of Mixed Breeds Have Crept Into Hearts of the Film Folk

By BYRON COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—Ever the hound dogs and alley cats of Hollywood can achieve that animal heaven usually reserved for pedigreed pets: adoption into a movie home.

Scores of them have done so, creeping with rugged coats and dejected mien into the affections of tender-hearted actor folk, and remaining there sleek, well-fed and happy.

George Brent has four pedigreed dogs, but he also has Mrs. Malaprop, a mongrel he found at an animal shelter. Another mongrel owner is Hugh Herbert.

Dog-givers have selected Clark Gable as a mark for their generosity. He has found six at his front door, each with a note requesting a home. He kept two and gave the others away.

Saga of Minnie
Minnie used to be an established member of the Virginia Bruce household. A striped alley cat, Minnie wandered in one day, was fed, and refused to leave. She soon produced progeny—quintuplets. When Virginia moved, the cat family moved, too, but Minnie disappeared the second day.

Claudine West, the scenarist, swings into action at sight of a homeless dog or cat. She now cares for two dogs and five cats in her own home, and "boards out" seven dogs and three cats. Another scenarist, Grover Jones, is especially partial to Old Sport, the only unpedigreed dog in his kennels.

"Enemy," a bright-eyed mongrel, mostly poodle, wandered onto a film location one day and became the pet of Florence Rice, who says he has more personality than any ribbon winner. "Spike," Joseph Calleia's mongrel, just wandered in, too, to join "Whiskers," his pedigreed sheep dog.

Humphrey Bogart's Manx cat he admits, is only one-fourth Manx—but the seven-year-old "Tommy" has been his constant companion through stage tours and is with him in Hollywood.

Adopts A Horse
"Rags" followed Beverly Roberts home from the corner market one evening. He's just a pooch, extraction uncertain. In the same manner did Ann Preston acquire her two ginger kittens.

Besides his pedigreed dogs, Warren William has "Belinda" and "Rags," the former an adopted stray, the latter rescued from the pound. "Miggs" is the distinctive name Patric Knowles gave the alley cat that adopted him.

Tom, Nellie and Hi-Pockets, three cats who adopted Dick Powell, now live in a fair state of peace with his thoroughbred dog. But Joan Blondell has Scraggy, a rather question-markish puch, and Caruso, a backfence vocalist. And when and if Joan and Dick marry—the peace be maintained.

Nouh Beery, Jr., however, probably outdoes them all. He adopted a stray horse, an Indian pony bought for $1 on a recent location.

The largest beetle of the 100,000 known species in the world is the brown Goliath beetle of equatorial Africa. It is about four inches long.

On an average, women are said to live longer than men because they live quieter lives and do not take so many risks.

Electric Stoves
The buildings are of trim brick, are fireproof and all look alike.

The townspeople will move in, August 15 and family breadwinners will begin paying Landlord Uncle Sam from $23.47 to $38.10 monthly for apartments, the price depending on whether they have 3, 4, 5 or 6 rooms. Rental will cover electricity used in running the new electric stoves and refrigerators the PWA has placed in every kitchen as well as hot and cold water and heating service.

Labor Savers
But the kitchen equipment is not the only thing that elicits "ahs" from housewives inspecting the apartments. They like the elevated radiators which allow sweeping under them is a minimum of back bending, the steel casement windows that may be washed inside and out from within the room, the incineration system in the kitchen, the glazed tile halls, walls that may be washed, copper screens in every window and shades already hung.

Then there are centrally located laundries, tennis courts, playground, kindergarten, library and auditorium. Techwood was created at a cost of $3,000,000 and replaced a negro section.

D. A. Calhoun, manager of the project, says residents for the 603 apartment units are selected from applicant families having incomes ranging from $1,200 to $1,800 annually and who live present in homes classified by the government as overcrowded or sub-standard.

More than 2,700 families have applied he says.

Jesse Brown Wins Bonus From Ford

Awarded $100 Check for Best Used Car Sales in Memphis District

Jesse Brown, salesman for Hope Auto company, Wednesday received a $100 bonus check from Ford Motor company of Memphis for selling the greatest net dollar value of used cars, based on a population bracket of the Memphis district.

Mr. Brown's record showed that he sold 65 used cars during the month of July for a total of $11,748.17. He competed against all salesmen in the Memphis district which comprises several southern states.

I. T. Urrey of the Hope Auto company was given special mention in the "News Flash," publication of the Ford Motor company, for the sale of new cars in the Memphis district, based on a population bracket.

Still Looks the Part
Behind him, sunk level with the window sill, was a radio, in his right hand he held a white handkerchief which he never pocketed. Occasionally he put it to his face. His sides tip-toed, spoke softly.

At 68 he still looks much as he did when George Gray Barnard, famous sculptor, cast Macfadden in bronze.

To his walking proclivities he has added an enthusiasm for flying, and now pilots his own plane. A year ago he walked 320 miles to Dansville, N. Y., in two weeks—then flew back in an hour and a half. This year he couldn't make the annual walk because of political engagements.

Advocates Stifle Tax
"I believe in a balanced budget," he says. "Constructive plans with that end in view should be formulated. What everyone wants is security, now, next year, and five years from now."

"I think business organizations should take their workers into partnership—sign them up for a division of the profits and do away with violence and bloody strikes."

"This could be done by allocating some of the profits to stockholders and some to the workers."

"I believe in a single tax, which would include all other taxes. As it is now, city, state and federal tax bodies eat up revenues by their numbers."

He also believes farmers should organize along business lines to protect their interests.

HOW ABOUT YOU YOUNG STEERS TURNING OUT TO PASTURE ON MY RANCH DURING YOUR VACATION? GRAZE ON BALES OF GREEN EGGS AN' HOME-SPROUTED HAM, AND INFLATE YOUR BELLOWS WITH MOUNTAIN-MELLOWED VAPOR—IS IT A SALE?

OKAY, BUT I'M NO HUMPTY-DUMPTY! THE ONLY STEED I'LL MOUNT IS A PADDED ROCKING CHAIR!

YOU CAN WRAP UP TWO WEEKS OF THAT BARGAIN FOR ME, HANK, AND WIRE YOUR HANDS TO SADDLE A WILD HAY-MOOSE, FOR RODEO KING HOOPLE! HE'S SO HOMESICK TO STRADDLE A REAL BRONC THAT HE'S EATING HIS MEALS ASTRIDE A SAW-HORSE

UM-M-MY WORD! WHAT'S THIS?

IT'S A HORSE ON YOU, MAJOR—

OUT OUR WAY

By WILLIAMS

SHE'S SWELL, TOO! AH-UH—WHEN SHE SAID SUCH NICE THINGS ABOUT ME, WHY-UH—WHUT DID YOU SAY?

I TOL' HER SHE NEVER HAD TO WINTER WITH YOU.

THE INSIDE DOPE.

BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES

???? WOT'S THAT ?? SOUNDS LIKE HUMAN VOICES—BY GOSH, THAT'S RIGHT

WHOEVER IT IS MIGHT DROP SOMETHING I CAN USE!!! LISSSEN AT 'EM—THEY'RE SURE MAKIN' PLENTY OF NOISE

A Bonanza!

I'LL HAVE T'BE CAREFUL N'NOT LET 'EM SEE ME—OH OH!! THEY'RE LEAVIN' IN A CAR! SOMEONE FROM TOWN, I SPOSE

By MARTIN

A PICNIC! AWWWWW

ALLEY OOP

THERE, Y'BIG YAP—MEBEE THAT'LL LEARN YUH T'KEEP YER BIG FRECKLED PAWS OUT OF MY AFFAIRS!

Wur Is Well Satisfied

NOW TO CONTINUE MY BUSINESS OF 'TURNIN' TH' HEAT ON OOP—AH, IT'S BEGINNIN' T'GET DARK—THAT'LL MAKE THINGS EASIER FOR ME—

AND TH' DINOSAURS LOOK AS IF THEY'VE GIVEN UP HOPE OF GITTIN' AT MY VICTIMS—HAH—EVERYTHING IS WORKIN' OUT SWELL.

EVEN IF THOSE DINOSAURS DO LEAVE, IT'S A CINCH THAT GANG WON'T BE GITTIN' OUTA THAT TREE BEFORE MORNING—

WHICH SUITS ME JUST FINE

WASH TUBBS

OF ALL THE GIRLS IN THE U.S.A. WHO HAVE DATES TONIGHT, PROBABLY NONE ARE SO EXCITED AS TWO-FISTED LULU BELLE, THE FEMALE SHERIFF.

HE'LL BE HERE ANY MINUTE, SONNY. QUICK, HOW DO I LOOK?

SWELL.

A Date's a Date With Lulu Belle

GLORY BE! IT'S TWO MINUTES AFTER EIGHT—HE'S LATE! GIVE SPOON-UP WALLIS FERGOT'S MAYBE SUMPIN'S HAPPENED. QUICK, CALL HIS ROOM—

HE'S PRESSIN' HIS PANTS. HEY, WHERE YOU GOIN'?

I'M GOIN' TO HIS ROOM, THAT'S WHERE—

THIS IS ME FIRST DATE IN TWENTY YEARS, SONNY, AND I'M TAKIN' NO CHANCES ON HIM BUSTIN' IT.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

LOOK, FELLAS... MR. BRIDGES WAS RIGHT!!

YEP! THERE ARE TWO MEN OUT ON THAT BRIDGE...THEY'RE LOWERING THEMSELVES OVER THE SIDE, ON A ROPE!

Up a Tree

OSIE, WHY IN THE WORLD DID YOU BRING THAT SAXOPHONE WITH YOU?

HUH, YOU THINK I WANT THOSE GUYS TO SWIPE IT?

LISTEN! THEY'VE DISCOVERED MR. BRIDGES BOY, HE'S LIABLE TO HAVE A FIGHT ON HIS HANDS! AND A TOUGH ONE TOO!

WE'D BETTER HIDE IN THIS TREE, IN CASE THOSE MEN COME BACK!

HURRY! ONE OF 'EM GOT AWAY.... IF HE SEES US, NO TELLING WHAT'LL HAPPEN!

GEE, WE HID OURSELVES RIGHT OVER THEIR CAR! THAT MAN'S COMING THIS WAY! WHAT'LL WE DO?

IF THIS WAS A MOVIE, THE 7TH CAVALRY SURE WOULD COME IN HANDY!!

MYRA NORTH, SPECIAL NURSE

MYSTER IS COMPLETELY BEWILDERED BY MYRA'S PRESENCE IN HIS STATEROOM AS HE RETURNS, DRAGGING THE UNCONSCIOUS SIR EDMOND

I CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT! WHEN AND HOW DID YOU COME ABOARD?

THAT NEED NOT TROUBLE YOU, MR. MYSTER. BUT I JUST HAD TO GET AWAY FROM THAT PARTY—

YOU MEAN YOU'VE LEFT YOUR DETECTIVE FRIEND TO COME HERE? EXPLAIN.

AFFAIRS OF THE HEART ARE DIFFICULT TO EXPLAIN. BUT... I WAS HOPING WE MIGHT FORGET THE PAST—

IT ALL SOUNDS TOO FANTASTIC... STILL, I'M POSITIVE NONE OF YOUR FRIENDS ARE ABOARD, SAVE LEW WEN—AND I PLAN TO DISPOSE OF HIM TONIGHT ALONG WITH DEVRIES...

WELL, DO YOU WANT ME TO GO? I CAME HERE VOLUNTARILY, YOU KNOW—

COME BACK HERE? OF COURSE WE CAN BE FRIENDS! THAT'S WHAT I'VE WANTED, ALL ALONG—
